

Name: Ditto

One-line Introduction: Ditto is the Omnitrix's DNA sample of a Splixson from the planet Hathor.

Appearance: Ditto is about the height of an average human child. He has white skin, a black and white head and face, black shoulders, large hands with four digits, and feet that are merely stubs. Ditto also has three fin-like growths on his head and gem-like extended sensory nodes on his arms and waist. The nodes on his arms are glands that store protoplasmic DNA, which is used to create his clones. In the Original Series, Ditto's clothes were black and had an overall-like design, green eyes with light green shines, and wore the original Omnitrix symbol on his forehead. In the Ultimate Alien intro, Ditto looked exactly the same as he did in the Original Series, except the white section outlining the hourglass symbol across his chest and arms was blue, and his eyes no longer had the light green shine. He wore the Ultimatrix symbol on his chest. In Omniverse, 11-year-old Ditto's design is roughly similar to his original appearance except he appears smaller and stubbier. All of his fins are recolored white, with the ones on the sides of his head now connected to his eyes. He has two small whiskers on each of his cheeks, his fingers are sharper, and the sensory nodes on his shoulders have been relocated to his shoulders and wrists. His jumpsuit has been altered as well, with his neck being completely black and the feet being cut off to reveal three cat-like toes on each foot. The Omnitrix symbol on his forehead has been recolored green. 16-year-old Ditto looks exactly like his 11-year-old self, except his fins are recolored green and his jumpsuit is now green with black patches under his arms, green sleeves, and black ankles. This jumpsuit seems to have a design based on the Omnitrix's insignia, with black triangles on the shoulders and green in the center. The three sensory nodes on Ditto's waist are now on a black belt. Like his younger self, Ditto wears the Omnitrix symbol on his forehead. Ken's Ditto looked the same as 10-year-old Ditto in the Original Series.

History: Ditto first appeared in Divided We Stand, where he was accidentally unlocked by Ben and fought Dr. Animo's mutant seagull. Then, Ditto played volleyball with his clones and, eventually, one of the Dittos was caught by Animo to have his DNA copied. Later, Ditto defeated Animo's army of Mutant Lepidopterran/Splixson Hybrids. In Ready to Rumble, Ditto saved Mrs. Fang and defeated Mr. Beck. In Ben Again, 16-year-old Ben in 11-year-old Ben's body used Ditto to battle Eon until the latter retreated. Ditto was locked by the Omnitrix's reconfiguration in Ben 10 Returns: Part 1. In Ben 10,000 Returns, Ditto was re-unlocked by Ben 10,000. In O Mother, Where Art Thou?, Ditto fought some Pretty Boy Vreedle clones and chased after Ma Vreedle. In A Fistful of Brains, Ditto and his clones tried to escape from Panuncian, but eventually failed in the end. In Animo Crackers, Ditto tried to chase Spanner, but was caught off guard and defeated by Future Dr. Animo. In Universe vs. Tennyson, Ditto fought Fistrick, but reverted. In A New Dawn, Ditto appeared for a short time when Ben was cycling through his aliens. In Ken 10, Ken as Ditto and Devlin found the Null Void Projector.

Weaknesses: If Ditto and his clones are too far apart from each other, he cannot change back into Ben until all the duplicates are close enough together, and it seems that this requires more power from the Omnitrix than normal. Ditto's clones can be fused back together with enough force. Being a Splixson, Ditto is at a massive disadvantage against a Panuncian. Ditto can be harmed by electricity. Ditto can be controlled by Vladats via their Corrupturas, but the latter cannot control all of the Ditto clones as each of them are independent, and the Corrupturas will not be copied across his clones. Ditto is not resistant to extremely cold temperatures. In the Original Series, Ditto's clones shared a link to keep track of each other, making it so that if one Ditto was hurt, all the others would feel the same pain and if one Ditto got killed, the others were automatically killed as well, thus negating the ability to form an army of clones. As of O Mother, Where Art Thou?, each clone is independent from each other's pain, meaning a clone can be killed without harming the others.

Powers and Abilities: Ditto has the ability to clone himself without limits through binary fission. Each Ditto clone is indistinguishable from each other and operates independently, regardless of what the others want them to do. This allows Ditto to do multiple tasks simultaneously or to cover a large area. The extended sensory nodes on Ditto's body assist in the sensory web that connects all of his clones by coordinating the hive mind communication between them. Ditto's clones are capable of re-merging back into one, and Ditto is able to remotely pull his other clone bodies toward him for this purpose. Ditto can stop the duplication process before a clone comes into their independent being, creating half-formed clones with some of their limbs fused and stuck to his own. Ditto's clones can also dissipate themselves at will. Ditto possesses enhanced durability. Ditto can jump surprisingly high for his size and is quite agile. Ditto can quickly burrow into the ground and breathe underwater.

Personality: Not mentioned.